1705, June 4 (no. 4), Santa Fe. Case of CRISTOBAL GONGORA and wife Ines de Aspeitia, living apart for one year. ^{Her} ~~xxx~~ testimony: The Padre Guardian of Santa Fe and Jose Blasquez went to her house, examined it and her clothing, ^{claiming} ~~claiming~~ it was by orders of the Padre Custodio, and left papers of excommunication. Husband's reply: As a soldier and husband of Ines de Aspeitia, while both were living at Santa Cruz, she came to Santa Fe on a visit and, while searching for some tobacco, he found some hidden human bones wrapped in a mantle; he then reported this to the then priest of Santa Cruz, Padre Alvarez; upon her return, he got these witnesses on the padre's advice: Miguel de Quintana, Jose Velasquez, Jose Giltomey, whereupon Padre Alvarez granted him a legal separation. But after 2 yrs., Padre Arranegui got the pair to live together again, against Gongora's will, and the latter no longer had marital relations with her. In 1704, when Gongora was in Santa Fe, his ~~step~~-father Juan de Chaves (Medina) went to his house looking for him, and, while he was there, Jose Antonio Romero came in, sword in hand, bent on killing him because of jealousy on seeing that the couple were living together again. For this reason he left his wife a second time, being counseled to do it by other friars. — Fray Juan Minguez, when called to testify, says ^{id} ~~says~~ that he did go with Jose Velasquez to examine Gongora's house at the latter's request, and that he did search through his wife's clothing ^h which had been given to her by the said Romero. — May 9, 1712, Ines de Aspeitia opened the case again. She was asked why she had not been living with her husband

Gongora these several years, having already been reunited and separated five times. Then the Padre Custodio had her deposited in the house of Capt. Sebastian Gonzales until the matter was resolved. Cristobal Gongora (26) was questioned again, when he said that he and his wife had been separated off and on for fifteen years, and that he now had a church divorce, etc., with repetition of charges.
